EDWARD M. CLEVELAND was born in Fluvanna County, Virginia, July 19, 1845. Both his father and grandfather, Jeremiah Cleveland, Sr. and Jr., were natives of Virginia. His mother, nee Sally Wills, was born in the same county, and his grandfather, Miles C. Wills, was also a native of the "Old Dominion." The subject of this sketch was the second of a family of nine children, eight of whom are now living, and he was reared and educated in Virginia. When the great civil war commenced Mr. Cleveland was only sixteen years old. In 1863, when the need of the South for soldiers became great, at the age of eighteen, he enlisted in the Fluvanna Artillery, under Captain Massey, in Colonel Nelson's battalion. He was in many skirmishes and in the battles of Kelley's Ford and Winchester. In the latter a twelve-pound cannon ball wounded him in the back part of the leg, near the knee, carrying away a portion of the flesh and injuring the cords. He was crippled and in Harrisonburg prison hospital twelve days; was considered unfit for service and was permitted to return home.

After his recovery he worked on his father's farm, and later rented 400 acres of grandfather Willis, which he farmed for five years. He was next employed as a clerk in a general merchandise store with his uncle, A. S. Burgess, of Central Plains, and the following year he came to California. He purchased seventy-five acres of choice land at Santa Paula, which he has improved and where he has made a very pleasant home.

In 1879 Mr. Cleveland was married to Miss M. J. Fowler. She was born in Indiana in 1855, and is the daughter of Mr. Welcome Fowler, of Indiana. Mrs. Cleveland is a member of the Christian Church. Mr. Cleveland is a member of the I. O. O. F., and in politics affiliates with the Democratic party.

"MEMORIES OF BYGONE DAYS"

BY

THOMAS CLEVELAND SADLER (BORN 1888)

THE SCHOOL

THERE WAS NO SCHOOL AT ANTIOCH UNTIL I WAS GROWN. THERE WAS A SMALL, ONE-ROOM SCHOOL ON THE SCOTTSVILLE ROAD AND ONE A LITTLE CLOSER ON THE ROAD TO PALMYRA. THEY WERE GETTING BETTER ONES ELSEWHERE. THE PEOPLE AROUND ANTIOCH NEEDED AND WANTED A BETTER SCHOOL SO THEY DECIDED TO DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT. MR ELIJAH KIDD WAS AN OLD BACHELOR AND A MEMBER OF THE SCHOOL BOARD FROM OUR DISTRICT. FATHER WAS ONE OF A COMMITTEE OF SEVORAL AROUND ANTIOCH TO SEE MR. KIDD AND ASK FOR A SCHOOL. AT THAT TIME WE HAD A VERY LARGE SUNDAY SCHOOL AT ANTIOCH. FATHER WAS THE MAIN SPEAKER WHEN THEY TALKED TO MR. KIDD AND THAT WAS HIS STRONG POINT. HE TOLD MR. KIDD HOW MANY CHILDREN THERE WERE ON ROLL IN SUNDAY SCHOOL AND HOW BADLY THEY NEEDED A GOOD DAY SCHOOL IN THE NEIGHBORHOOD. MR. KIDD SAID, "YOU HAVE THE CHILDREN THERE NOW BUT BY THE TIME WE GET THE SCHOOL BUILT AND GOING THEY WILL ALL BE GONE AND THERE WON'T BE ANYONE TO ATTEND IT" FATHER SAID "YOU JUST GIVE US THE SCHOOL AND WE WILL ATTEND TO THE REST OF IT" THEY GOT THE SCHOOL.

(NOTE THOMAS CLEVELAND SADLER WAS THE SON OF WILLIAM J. SADLER AND EMMA CLEVELAND, DAUGHTER OF THOMAS CLEVELAND)

P.S. GEO. B's FATHER, JEREMIAH, WAS ONE OF THE FOUNDING FATHERS OF FAYANNA BAPTIST CHURCH. GRANDPA GEO. WAS SUPERINTENDENT & TAUGH A CLASS THERE FOR OVER 50 YRS. IN THE WINTER OF 1911 THE ENROLLMENT WAS 58 (32 OF WHICH WERE KINFOLK) THEIR ATTENDANCE ON SNOWY DAYS WAS 15 & COLLECTION 14 CENTS!

Others will no doubt tell today the facts of the life of my uncle George Cleveland, and I long to be there to hear them. I can only send these few scattered memories as loose flowers from the home-garden to drop upon his grave.

Really, I did not have the privilege of seeing this uncle very often, though he was my father's highly prized half-brother. Fluvanna church was many long miles away from Palmyra when there were no automobiles. People were not in the habit of traveling such great distances in the years following the Civil War, for then horses, too, were very scarce. My father often told how, in the lower end of the county, there was left, in the whole neighborhood, (at the end of the war) no horse at all -- only one poor mule, who, despite the Bible declaration that "The ass knoweth his master's crib," was not really sure where his home was, for he was in a constant state of being lent out to plow for some neighbor a little patch of ground.

Of course my Uncle George would often come to the county seat on Court Days, but he was such a home-loving man that he always persisted in going back to "Lony and the children" when the day was over, and never could be persuaded to spend the night with us.

He was almost sure to be present, however, at Sunday school conventions and soldiers' reunions, for patriotism and religion were stronger within him than his homing instincts, even. People were always glad when, at these meetings, he could be persuaded to speak, for he struck out straight, with sure aim, for what is true and worthwhile. And he did this in his own original fashion--just honestly and simply being himself.

He used to tell his audiences how the outbreak of the war had cut off his schooling, but I thought the twinkle in his eye and his zest as he spoke of army life betrayed the fact that to his boyish heart the marching was greatly preferable to the schooling-- that he had been, at the time, rather glad of the escape. Nevertheless, he did wish, in later life, for more education in order to multiply his powers of service to his fellow-men.

Even my father's best opportunity for knowing this young brother of his had been in the army-- in the Fluvanna Artillery. And in my childhood my chief knowledge of Uncle George was gathered from Father's war reminiscences. He nearly always called him "George Cleveland," doubtless from the habit formed in camp, among many Georges. He always classed him among "the boys" -- the younger set in the company. There were many innocent pranks of his that my father highly relished and would chuckle over in the telling -- clean and harmless fun. But sometimes my father would shake his head at things that some of the other boys had called jokes, which were not harmless but wrong. George Cleveland, in camp as at home, never thought bad language was funny or smart or manly. He was a man of clean lips.

We have spoken of his love of home. He was only a youth-- not yet twenty-two-- when he married and founded a home of his own. One of his neighbors, David Farrar, remarked that it was the way of the Cleveland boys, first, to get religion and next, to get a good wife. I have heard that the boy, George, thinking to impress his sweetheart with his manliness, had rigged up for himself a pipe and was proudly puffing at it when the gentle "Lony" surprised him and put a stop to this smoking by declaring, "Look here, George Cleveland, if you want to talk to me, throw that pipe away."

Let me quote here three sentences from a recent letter, written by one who knew him well in his every-day life: "He was plain-spoken, slow to anger, quick to see the other man's side. He was never known to gossip. He loved good music." -- Strong and compact praise.

But everybody's first thought of him is that he was a man of God. -- I could never forget his tone of conviction when he said to me once : "I've come to the conclusion that this is God's world and that HE IS RUNNING IT YET." This declaration had all the freshness of a new discovery, although he had been living on that basis all his life. He had discovered it for himself ; he had come up to it over a new road in his own experience; it had flashed upom him with all the freshness of a new truth. -- I saw him again when his heart was wrung with bitter sorrow-- impossible to understand, unbelievable-- and yet he was still, somehow, trusting the Lord and holding to his hand.

Long ago, when his father had died, the funeral sermon had challenged the community to "behold the upright man, for the end of that man is peace." You know how worthy was the son also of a similar tribute. If only one Christian in all the world had proved what God can make of a man who trusts and obeys him, the fact would be none the less proved. The rest of us could never thereafter plead ignorance of the way we ought to live. And, you descendants of this good man whose fragrant memory the service today seeks to make permanent, you have behind you a goodly line of God-fearing men. Yours indeed may well be the prayer,

"God of our fathers, known of old,
.....
Be with us yet,
Lest we forget,
Lest we forget."

You members of Fluvanna church are recalling today that George Cleveland was your Sunday school superintendent for a long time and taught a class here for about forty years. -- I watched him once as he listened to some young Sunday school worker discuss methods. Uncle George perhaps scratched his aged head a bit in his effort to follow the psychology of these raw theories as to how to tackle a Bible lesson. Then he got up and said, "I don't know about all that. All I know is to study as well as you can what the Bible says and to call upon the Holy Spirit to take charge of the message and of the hearts of you and your class and to get the lesson across."

You know how he loved his church-- this old church of his fathers. But you also remember how ready he was to honor and to work with other denominations. Once a Methodist minister appointed a Saturday for the members of his congregation to come together at Wesley's Chapel to lower the pulpit and make other improvements with hammer and saw. But the only ones to show up were George Cleveland and a man who was not a member of any church. Next day the minister reproached his flock with the fact that nobody had come to work "except a Baptist and a poor sinner."

The sturdy pioneer, Leatherstocking, had been a brave soldier and had played a hero's part in times of peace. Then, when death came a-knocking at his heart, he stood up like a man to meet his last enemy, answering "Here!" as at army roll-call. Even so the aged George Beckwith Cleveland, old soldier as he was, died at his work, standing on his feet. Who can doubt that at his Captain's call his true and trusting heart had only to answer, "Here!"

FOREWORD

Having come so near the end of my journey in this my 93rd. year, realizing that the past is fascinating and instructive for what it has been, and the future is alluring and beckoning for what it will be, I have jotted down these memories and obseerations of the days in the Old South for my beloved families, kin, and valued friends, hoping to help or at least entertain them. As "No man liveth or dieth to himself" I pray earnestly that my life may not have been in vain, but may have influenced some one to "walk in the paths of righteousness for His Name's Sake."

CHAPTER I

Some Recollections of Slave Days

IN THE SOUTH before "The War" life on a large farm or plantation was never dull or tiresome, especially for us children. There were so many exciting places to be visited and enjoyed. There was the creek, singing gaily over clean white rocks and sand, swirling masterfully around any sudden or permanent obstacle in its path. It was fun to wade along till you came to a deep dark hole where lived the lovely salmon-colored leeches that darted out and stuck to your ankles with round open hungry mouths. How we scampered to the bank scared of them, but not failing to venture back again.

My playmates were two little negro girls, children of the cook "Aunt Susan." We were constantly happy together, always under the eye of my mammy Polly. At Easter we began our fishing trips to the creek. Our tackle was smooth strong poles about a yard long, one end gashed for a stout cord line to which was attached a long bent pin. The bait was most exciting, requiring both courage and skill to cover the pin with the ceaselessly wiggling angle worm tightly enough to let the fish nibble it. At Whitsuntide we went hunting wild strawberries hidden away in little grassy corners known only to the slaves.

The high days were at wheat threshing time. Lots of men with pitchforks and other instruments were there. The horses were hitched to long levers attached to a big machine in the center of a large circle around which the horses walked, making a smooth toe-path (fine for children to play games in). The wheat was poured in huge piles on the barn floor. The straw was built up into tall stacks around a long pole set in the ground—this was fine for children to slide down—a hard breath-taking climb to the top and a mad dash to the bottom. The first bought machine I recall was a wheat fan. It was painted red with a large hopper at the top and a chute at the bottom. It was fun to stand under the flying chaff and watch the pretty clean wheat run through the sieves in huge piles to be put into bags and carried to the big flour mills on the James River.

More high days occurred with the hauling in of great wagonloads of hay to be stored in the barn lofts. We could ride in the wagons back to the fields. The corn-crib too was entertaining. The shellers knocked the grains from the cobs so fast. We would search for red grains to keep for good luck.

The slaves believed much in good and bad luck which they accepted in joy or sorrow as coming to them from the "Great Master," as favor or punishment for their deeds. They were deeply religious and taught us to pray. They said He was always close by seeing everything we did. If we could only put that faith in practice how much more real our religion would be. But we have so many by-paths of reasonings and doctrines that we lose the "light unto our pathway" and follow our own devices, calling it "progress."

At the barn were almost always pretty baby animals, colts, calves, lambs, kittens and puppies to play with and love.

The spring was a place of joy. The laundry was done there in summer; there were two large iron pots with fire underneath for boiling, two wash benches for tubs, long lines of sweet-smelling clothes draped the trees and bushes. The spring itself was beautiful, boxed with heavy planks for the basin, with a clean flat stone platform and a home-grown gourd on a standard. The spring house was filled with stone jars and pewter pans of milk and cream, and firkins of butter on tiered shelves. When a big thunderstorm came up someone had to run to the spring and move the milk to higher shelves to keep it from overflowing. We made play-houses under the trees and waded in the branch that ran from the spring house.

Harvesting the wheat was a gala time. We liked to see the reapers with their cradles glistening in the sun. There were generally three reapers. The head one cut the first swathe across the field as a guide to a straight line. The other reapers took their places. Behind them were the binders and shockers who built the bundles into shocks to stand against wind storms while seasoning. They were ornamental, looking like doll houses in regular formation across the fields. A pleasant feature was hearing the slaves sing in perfect timing with their swinging strokes. Mostly their tunes had a sad or mournful tone but the fugue parts, coming in perfect harmony, were wonderful. Even their chanting had melody, showing that the love of music was a divine gift to the race.

The spinning and weaving room was entertaining, especially in winter. We could sit under the loom and watch the pedals work in regular time making a little song. And we could see the shuttles shot from one hand to the other carrying the thread or woof through the warp that was stretched across the loom from notched panels of wood so that the pattern design could be counted. The constant song of the spinning wheel was mournful but soothing. We could help with the winding machine, a big wheel fastened to a standard, turning it with the right hand, holding the yarn in the left hand until a thick hand was made. Someone tied it and took it from the wheel.

Occasionally the carriage house was open to us when the driver oiled the harness and polished the metal trimmings. We could sit in the carriage and play we were going on a trip. It was fun.

Sheep-shearing was a joyful time though we always felt sorry for the lambs when the mothers were put on the platform to be clipped. The wool was taken to the creek, washed with home-made soap, dried on the grass and packed in bags and taken to the woolen mills at Scottsville.

Every farmhouse had a hop-vine growing on the vegetable-garden fence. It was both ornamental and useful in various ways. The foliage and flowers steeped into a strong tea relieved sore throat and tickling coughs; made into poultices it relieved chest colds; fermented and thickened with corn meal it made the famous yeast cakes for raising light-bread. This was universal—if a neighbor ran out of yeast or let it get too old, she could always get a fresh start from a neighbor. This was a pleasant neighborly obligation, like borrowing a chunk of fire under like circumstances! What excellent Sally-Lunn and risen muffins this yeast made! It was put into mashed persimmons to quicken fermentation into beer. The dried foliage and flowers of the hop-vine were hung from the attic ceiling for winter use along with life everlasting, catnip, flag root and many other fragrant herbs.

In the spring there were wonderful trips to the woods and fields to get medicine for clearing out the system and dyestuffs for the stockings and dresses of the slaves. We used cherry bark for cough syrups, sassafras tea for low fevers and headaches, vermifuge for worms, flag root for babies' stomach ache, and several kinds of oak bark, hickory bark, and walnut bark and hulls for dyestuffs. Also in the fall we gathered wild fruits and nuts, grapes for jam, persimmons for beer, and honey shucks and sweet gum for chewing.

Polly had entire charge of my clothes and hair dressing. My stockings were white India cotton. My shoes were black and red Morocco—sandals for summer, high tops for winter. Polly had a bureau for my things. I had to obey her in everything. She loved to dress me up with ribbon bows and sashes and ruffled pantalettes buttoned on, and fancy linen aprons. She did my laundering. I ate with her at the second table. She taught me to put my food into my mouth with my fork in my left hand—never to put my knife into my mouth. She kissed away my hurts and bruises, told me wonderful stories she must have imagined and sang me to sleep with chanting songs. I loved her dearly.

There were social castes among the servants. The house and yard workers were always neatly dressed, had polite manners, and were skilled in their various jobs as cutting and sewing fine seams for the white people, waiting in the dining room, receiving visitors, cleaning house, polishing brass, and cutting and making garments for all the slaves. These ate together in the dining room at the second table and had a gay time. They did not mix with the field and stable workers, who ate together in the kitchen in the yard.

Some of the men had wives living on adjoining farms. I recall one of ours had a wife on Dr. Cocke's plantation. They were permitted to go to their wives' houses on Saturday afternoons to be back early Monday mornings. Sometimes they did extra jobs to be allowed to go on Friday. Most masters used the most intelligent man to be the boss over the others. To him they gave daily instructions about the work. The others were required to obey him. He could use mild punishment if needed, but no cruelty. He made his report at night. The slaves holding positions were dependable and faithful to their charges.

In case of misdoings the slaves were gifted at finding excuses, sounding so plausible that they escaped punishment. They also had a keen sense of humor and could make you laugh when you did not want to. Though wild by nature and hating discipline, they developed a great pride in excelling in whatever their duties were. They coveted praise from their masters and delighted to hold important responsibilities. They were perfectly dependable in the great crisis of the War, and when they were left in charge of the white families, true to their trust. Long training in skill and behavior was a passport for them later. They went from private dining rooms to the finest hotels in cities as butlers, waiting maids, laundresses, dressmakers, janitors and hostlers on racing tracks, and into domestic and farm work.

It was only after their freeing, especially during the Reconstruction period under the vile influence and advice of the low-down carpet-baggers that they fell from their high places and ideals—that is, the younger generation took the infection; the old ones remained true to honor and good conduct. The close ties of devotion between the old generation and their masters were not diminished by any future events but remained till their deaths. In bondage they were carefree and happy, sitting before their cabin doors singing to the accompaniment of their banjos, fiddles, mouth-harps and accordions.

The slaves were always ready to make music for the white people's home parties, especially at the Christmas season, which they enjoyed to the fullest. Quantities of food and firewood were stacked up and they were given a week's holiday with only minor jobs to do at Christmas. Everyone, grown-ups and children, was given gifts by his master and mistress—every kind of gift suited to each one. How they gloried in the occasion! They told us many pretty stories about the Babe and the miraculous signs. They said the stars shone brightest at Christmas midnight of all the year and angels dressed in gold flew down and stood around the stable and sang, and that all the cattle got down on their knees at midnight every Christmas all over the world.

The slaves lived close to nature and many secrets were revealed to their open minds, giving them unquestionable faith in God.

These were halcyon days; evil deeds were few and far apart. The big outside world was space a long way from our little favored section of the globe. Men lived in faith and with a high sense of responsibility toward each other. A man's word was his bond. Plenty and contentment ruled supreme—no restlessness or urge to seek new worlds. Life was easy and satisfying. But life is made up of cycles of duration of time and in its natural order must needs change at the end of an ordained period. The study of the cycles is interesting and important, as they affect the future of nations. This one is especially so, as it presaged a great climax in the history of the slaves.

I clearly recall the day of the slaves' departure towards the end of the War. They gathered in front of the house to say good-bye. Each adult and child had a tightly tied bundle on his back. They were laughing and saying "I'm free and don't have to work any more." The old ones were weeping and so were we. Polly hugged and kissed me, she had tears in her eyes; I clung to her and begged her to stay with me. I watched them go up the long hill through the woods gate and out of sight, leaving their cabins of plenty and going they knew not where, but happy and full of trust. These children of destiny were both pitiful and fortunate.

How still everywhere was. I wandered to the cabins—not a sound of life—the doors shut tight. I went to the barn and spring; only silence and sadness were there. The little play-houses under the trees, the clotheslines, the big tubs and pots seemed to say "They are all gone for good."

How lonesome I felt. No consolation anywhere in our old happy play grounds. Where were my laughing playmates? And why had they gone away? No answer but loneliness and wonder. The sheep and cows and horses stood and looked at me as if saying, Where is everybody gone?

The next morning when I woke Polly was not there. I had never combed my hair or put on my shoes and stockings. We a hard job! I could not get them to pull on straight, and my hair would do nothing but fly about and get tangled.

My mother had no time to help me. She had to go to the kitchen in the yard to get breakfast over a big fireplace with heavy pokers and skillets and ovens. That was a painful job. The War was still going on. Only my three brothers were at home. They had to learn to do all the stable and barn work, cut the wood and bring water from the spring. They thought it was hard work.

Some Yankee stragglers had come to the farm and carried off some horses, cattle and sheep before the slaves left. This I did not see, but I do remember later my brothers and the slaves taking the horses to the woods every day to hide them from raiders. The neighbors were all in a stir expecting the raiders any day. They were busy trying to hide away small valuables and food.

News was scarce and depressing. Scouts went to the nearest towns to try to hear the Yankee movements and watch for the raiders, then gallop back to notify watching families. Only fear and dread filled every home. The Yankees were coming now in companies of fifty and a hundred, led by their officers bent on stealing and destroying everything they saw, galloping across the fields and crops, jumping and knocking down fences and gates—even yard fences.

They clattered all over the house in their spurs and swords, into the private bedrooms, opening bureau drawers, trunks and closets, taking anything they wanted; into the pantry, opening barrels of flour, filling sacks, carrying them off; into the smokehouse, taking all the meat and other supplies like regular rogues. I ran into the bedroom, hid behind a door that had dresses hanging on it. An officer looked behind the door, saw me, and said, "Sissy, are you scared?" I said, "Yes, sir," in a weak voice. He said, "We won't hurt you." But I did not trust him. I never moved till they galloped away.

That was lawless, savage warfare. In the homes of the wealthy the soldiers destroyed costly draperies and curtains and cushions by slashing them with their swords. They were rude and impudent to the ladies of the families, attempting to jerk off their earrings and neck chains. They carried off quantities of valuables and burned any private papers they came across. They raided court houses, burning records and papers. The South had a lot to forgive in these our outnumbering conquorers whose minds were filled with bitter hatred.

I seemed to feel more and more lonely as the stillness lay over every familiar playground, the barn yard with the hay wagons, plows, pitchforks, wheelbarrows, shovels, hoes and axes. There were no games you could play by yourself. There was no fun left in the world, only sadness. I wanted to ask Polly when this sadness would end, but I could not find her. She was gone. I could not go to my Aunt Betty's any more to play with Clara Lucius and Marion as I could not go and come the mile alone.

These were the days that tried men's hearts. There had been happy marriages between the North and the South, so brother was forced to stand against brother by compelling circumstances. There were many touching scenes where in line of duty they must take part in this carnage while their hearts bled with grief. No conscientious objectors were tolerated even though it were the firesides of their own childhoods they were against. A Civil War must needs be a cruel war.

The War had been brought now to Virginian soil. Money had long been depreciating. Supplies of food and clothing to be sent to the soldiers were getting exhausted. All the yarn had been knitted into socks for them. Only straw hats could be furnished by the women. We children were taught to plait the straw into braid for the hats. Many families cut their handsome floor rugs into blankets for the soldiers; every sacrifice was made at home for them.

Raiding was done now on a big scale. The aim of the Yankees now was to put the South in a starving condition and force a surrender. Even in their rags our soldiers' spirits were brave and surrender was a bitter pill to them.

Following behind a squad of raiders one day on the highway, my brother Granville saw an object sticking in the mud. He found it to be a large ham which he joyfully brought home. It was all the meat we had and was doled out for at least a month.

From the battles near Richmond and Petersburg we could often hear the mournful boom of cannon. The air was murky with powder smoke. Gloom and anxiety hung over every home. News would drift in that a friend or relative was killed.

A big reinforcement was sent down by the Yankees to the scene of action. Lee realized his men were outnumbered ten to one and it was folly to try to carry on longer. The meeting was held at Appomattox, Virginia, I think, April 9, 1865. It was a surprise to his men; they wept like children from disappointment. It was comparatively a handful of ragged, hungry Southerners—only a few thousand against many thousands. They had fought valiantly for what they believed to be a just cause. The slaves were private property purchased from the seafaring Northern states who found it a lucrative business for many years. We believed States Rights had been violated.

Of course, it was foolhardy for the South to go to war with all the odds against us, for we had no experienced military leaders and only a few capable West Point graduates, no trained armies, no factories for war materials, a few small arsenals of heavy, clumsy guns, no navy, only a few river boats with sail and hand power, no mint, only paper currency that was soon depreciated.

The worst of all the buzzing activities of the Quaker abolitionists of the North, both public and secret, was led by Fred Douglas, an escaped slave, son of a white man and negress mother, whom they entertained in their homes. He was a gifted orator. His exaggerated speeches and their inflammatory talks and stories were sent endlessly to England and other countries in Europe, giving false impressions of Southern treatment of the slaves. So the masters were looked upon as monsters who beat and drove their servants even to death. The countries could do nothing but believe what they heard and read, backed by the leading preachers of the Northern pulpits, mainly Reverend Henry Ward Beecher, who used his talents to stir up strife and hatred toward slave-owners falsely.

Other countries overlooked the fact that New England had once grown rich dealing in Negro slave trade, capturing them in their native land, bringing them huddled like cattle in ships to the South, and selling them like horses on the public block at auction. Who were the worst offenders to the Negroes, the North or the South?

It was to the advantage of the master financially and personally to keep his slaves in good health and comfortable houses and clothes, to insure good service in all the forms of work on the plantation. He could reason it no other way for success and contentment.

When the last delegation from the South was sent to Washington almost at the eleventh hour to try to mediate, Mr. Lincoln would not receive them.While we have nothing to thank Mr. Lincoln for, we believe he would have been shrewd enough to heal the breach of secession and make conciliatory laws that the vanquished could accept. He would not have tolerated that senseless carpet-bag rule so shameful to the Federal Government. The South deplored his groundless assassination, for at that stage of events the country needed wisdom at the helm, not animosity.

The Negroes would have missed that ill-advised schooling they received and would have learned to adjust themselves without bitter ideas and motives toward starting a new future. They especially needed wise law-making since they were free and must learn to think for themselves.

CHAPTER II

Reconstruction Period

THIS was the blackest farce of a government ever forced upon an intelligent people. It was a siege of pillaging and corruption. Congress was a set of weaklings bent only on legislating laws for humiliating their victims. Not a statesman was wise enough to begin to reunite the broken Union by making honorable laws that the conquered could accept. President Grant was a weakling and a failure without vision.

The low-down element of the North flocked South as carpet-baggers, took up their abode with Negroes, duped them into thinking they could be the rulers, and heaped all sorts of indignities on the whites. The carpet-baggers set up a court and brought the former masters to mock trials, demanding that they divide all their property with the Negroes, saying, "The bottom rail must be on top." They actually threw many men into jails. This went on for a long time. It was maddening that the South had no representation in Congress as their voting had been cancelled.

After a long while the Negroes found they were only the cat's paw for the carpet-bag lawmakers who got all the benefits with no spoils coming to them. So they spurned and deserted the carpet-baggers as deceivers. But the evil seeds had been sown and absorbed by the younger Negro men who lived in idleness and mischief.

No white woman could go about alone without risk of attack from this class of low-down Negroes; so it became necessary for white men to become patrolers and members of Ku Klux Klans for the protection of their families. The Federal government gave no protection. It simply left the million and a half Negroes to shift for themselves, without providing them food, clothing, law and order. The first two winters they suffered from cold and hunger. Many of the old ones died under the stress. The South was so impoverished that both races lacked food and medical care. Doctors were few and far apart on the plantations. Many had given their lives to the Lost Cause.

The Negroes, being gregarious by habit, suffered from epidemics, especially of tubercular troubles. After a long while they began drifting back to their former homes, asking to rent the cabins and pay for them with their work. They did not give very reliable service since they had gotten the taste of idleness and wanted no regulations or rules.

A few of them were ambitious to own a house and mule, but that was not a popular desire. They felt no responsibility for the future. Even when public schools were provided for them, they would not attend regularly enough to keep up the average to pay the teacher. They were incurably shiftless. Even when attendance was made compulsory they still played truant. The Negroes were keen on probing a stranger and placing him in his proper rank. He was either gentry or common, whom they called "poor white trash", spurned, and would not mix with.

Strict morality did not disturb the Negroes' minds. Stealing and falsifying were not crimes; it was only borrowing from him who had plenty. The Jewish maidens in Egyptian captivity were told by God to borrow from their mistresses jewels of gold on the eve of their flight from bondage; there was no provision for returning them. Was that a form of stealing to be practiced by other slaves?

These children of destiny came to another guidepost. Being freed from bondage where every need had been supplied, they must seek a living by hiring themselves to owners of large plantations. Many of these had to be abandoned and farming done on a smaller scale. Money was scarce, wages low. The South was in upheaval, struggling to get on its feet, while seeing its Golden Age become a thing of the past.

For a long, long time this changed, stinted existence went on, this imbecile misrule by vindictive conquerors, this struggle for honorable adjustment. Because the Southerners were of high, proud lineage, their stout hearts would not lose hope nor whine.

Planning wisely their resourses and households, the men, many of them crippled by wounds, and the boys took up farm work. The women, making themselves long-eared bonnets and sheep-skin gloves, went into the open-fire kitchens to handle the cranes, the pots and dutch ovens—this they did cheerfully and with a will. Slowly the picture began to unfold, showing some signs for better times. Some public industries were started: cotton and tobacco factories, iron foundries, brick plants, copper shops, tanneries, lumbering and gold mining.

By this time the slaves were ready and eager to return and be hired for any jobs that could be found. So the hired stage began another era.

Dear to the hearts of the ex-slaves was the South. They did not want to live in any other part of the country. Through all the hardships they endured during their early years of freedom, they could not be persuaded to leave the South. I recall arrangements being made by white agencies for free homes and free passage to Liberia, Africa. A small number of families went, but were never fully satisfied and happy. Thousands would not consider going, so the project was abandoned. Naturally, the Sou was home to the first who were brought as strangers to a forei shore. Here they were kindly received, amply provided fo taught to be skilled workers and loved by their owners. He their children were born and raised under happy conditio and no calamities could uproot them. There was that namele tie between the two races, a sort of mutual dependence th nothing has been able to eradicate. It was born in those far-aw days when the colonists fought their way to "liberty and t pursuit of happiness" through the century of the progress a glory of the "Old South." Their bondage was not by chance the avarice of man, but by the Hand of Destiny "that shapes o end."

The Negroes were trustworthy and faithful to their char during the awful years of the War. There are many noble dee and touching scenes of devotion among the two races that ha been recorded in the Lamb's book of life. That is "gold tried in t fire." During the long years of readjustment and poverty in t South, the former owners divided their little with the nee and sick ex-slaves. Doctors treated them free, druggists ga them medicines, white nurses treated their serious illnes merchants gave them long credits until the dawning of a bet day came out of the gloom.

The Negroes loved public notice and a crowd. This happen in a Virginia court: A Negro man had been ordered to court f stealing chickens. Dressed in his best clothes with hat on o side, he walked airily down the aisle, passing near the judg stand. The latter said, "Are you the defendant?" Doffing his h the Negro said, "No judge, there's the fendant," and he point to a lawyer sitting near. Drawing himself up and touching h chest he said, "Ise the gentleman what stole the chickens."

They had a keen sense of humor. A negro church decided th should have a fence around their cemetery. They called a mee ing with the deacons in charge. The pastor opened the meetin saw Deacon Jones coming in and said, "Here comes Broth Jones. We expect a large contribution from him." The secreta held his pencil ready. Brother Jones rose and said, "Broth Parson, I don't see no 'casion for a fence, for them that's insi can't get out, and them that's outside shore don't want to g inside."

This exhortation was made by a Negro preacher about t time of the Civil War: "Behold! The Queen of Sheba went do to Jerusalem a-ridin' on a mule, and lo! that mule flung her, a she fell among thieves, but they passed by on the other side. I and by she come to herself and she got again on dat mule's ba and she looked and she saw 'em comin' from afar, and five of 'em was wise and five of 'em was foolish. In their hands they carried palm leaf fans and was singin' 'Great is Susannah of the Phesians.' And they waved them fans in that mule's face. As she rode down the street, she looked up to the third story window and cried, 'Fling down Jezebel.' They said, 'We ain't gwi fling her down.' The second time she cried, 'Fling down Jezebel.' The answer came, 'We ain't gwi fling down no Jezebel.' Again the third time she cried 'Fling down Jezebel.' This time they changed their minds and flung her down and she busted into pieces that could not be numbered for the multitude thereof. They picked up twelve basketfuls of her fragments and five loaves and two small fishes. Now, brethen, in the Day of Jedgment whose wife am Jezebel gwi be?"

The Negroes had a striking and amusing way of making a request in a perfectly negative form of speech. A company opened an employment bureau in a small Southern town. There was great bustle in equipping the building and there were reports that everybody could get a job. One day Sam, the town loafer, decided to make application. He was so bewildered by the clicking of the typewriters and elegance of the room that he couldn't speak. Soon the owner recognized him, came up to him and said, "Sam what can we do for you?" Sam wet his lips and said, "You'll don't know anybody what don't want nobody to do nothin' for nobody, does you?"

In the Reconstruction Period necessity made us "the mother of invention." Many substitutes had to be made since we had no money, no credit, no court of appeal and no imported goods—only fields without laborers.

For coffee we must needs parch wheat, barley and other grains, strain and clarify it with whites of eggs and drink it thankfully. No sweet aroma of grinding and boiling coffee greeted our nostrils in the early mornings.

For sugar we turned to the busy little bee, for the first time realizing its great worth in time of need. In the days of plenty the hiving and robbing of their hives were gala occasions. In the spring around Eastertime they had to be watched closely as the overcrowded hives would swarm out, under the leadership of the queen bee, leaving the newly-hatched bees in the hive. The men would select a nearby tree, preferably fruit, set a small table under it, placing a new bee-hive baited with sugar or honey on top of the table. The children, black and white, would run for tin pans, bells, horns and chains to make a hideous din and confuse the queen, so she would settle on the selected tree. Otherwise she would settle in a tall tree or lead her followers to the nearest woods where the men could not hive them and they would be lost to the owner. The hives were two stories high. The top one was filled with lovely honeycombs. In the lower one the bees hatched their families, feeding them bee-bread that had passed through their bodies (predigested food). This room was never disturbed. In the fall, only on a moonlight night, a man would put on a big fitted head-dress, leather gloves and boots, take a slow-burning roll of woolen cloth, which was smoking to stupefy the bees, and lay it near the bottom door hole. Then he would grab the top cap, run to a room in the house, shutting the doors and windows. Many bees pursued him fighting furiously. Three fourths of the honey was removed to large dishes. His trip back was even more perilous as the whole hive was up in arms by then. We children could only run and dodge the bees. Later, saucers of honey were given us in the kitchen.

As our flocks of sheep decreased, tallow for candles got scarce so we turned to the bees for another product, bees-wax. The process was crude but clever. Cotton threads of four or five strands were twisted into cords about twelve yards long for a wick. An iron pot with a slow fire under it in the yard contained the melting bees-wax. A person held a long-handled, forked stick over the wick to keep it evenly in the wax, which clung to and covered it completely and smoothly. Then a good runner took the end of the wick from the pot, ran fleetly across the yard the length of the wick to harden it in the air. It was then ready for wrapping around the candle stick which a skilled carver of the family had made of wood and tin. This had a round bottom, plate size, to which a tin loop was tacked for a handle. A small round rod about eight inches long fitted into the bottom plate and had on the top a small tin circle. Through a hole in this the wick was pushed to be lighted. A woman draped the wick in loops around the stick in ornamental style. The candle was lighted with much pride and use.

Having no bought molded or loaf cheeses, fresh turned clabber dripped through knitted bags made good cottage cheese for a spread and helped out the butter supply.

Lacking sugar, everybody filled his cookie crocks with ginger snaps, horse cakes and honey cookies. Candies were either sugar cane syrup cooked thick, pulled and plaited into squares, or sorghum taffy also pulled and kept cold. These were delicious and wholesome; the making of them occasioned gay parties from house to house, ending in dances and games till midnight.

Other parties we had were quilting parties for the ladies in the day; the men arrived at night for dancing and escorted them home—if in winter, on horseback or in sleighs.

There were cotton-picking parties at night for men and women. At ten-thirty the work stopped and there was dancing till midnight. The cotton was piled on the hearth in front of a fire of red, hot coals so the seeds could be easily picked out. The ladies wearing fancy aprons and the men with kitchen towels carried on gay conversations.

Corn-shucking parties were more laborious for men. The ladies were present to wait on them with cool, sweet cider and persimmon beer as they worked, and to prepare the big supper in the yard at midnight when the shucking was over.

These home parties were most enjoyable. So many different kinds of games were played: the rollicking, amusing ones were more popular than written contests that required serious thought. Puss in the Corner was a scramble; The Ship Comes A-laden was for quick thought; Mammy Sent me to You was amusing. In Present and Advise you were given an object by one person, advised what to do with it by another; then you presented it to someone telling him the advice, and at the close you had to tell aloud to whom you had given it and why; this was killingly funny. Household and Kitchen Furniture was uproarious. Jake Laughed had quick wit and action, making you laugh till you cried.

The home dances were delightful. In square dances there were eight or ten couples on the floor doing pretty figures—many of them intricate with low bowings and quick promenading quadrilles without a mistake. The Schottische was graceful with smooth gliding across the room with couples in diagonal movements. Choosing Partners was exhilarating: it started with couples and one man left alone; the singing said "Go choose your partner." The lone man approached a couple, seized the girl's arm and danced away with her; the next lone man did the same thing until the whole room was in motion. The last figure was always the Virginia Reel, whose intricate steps were carried on until the last minute of the time. The fun and comradeship of these parties were most enjoyable for the whole families.

There was trust and good will among neighbors, a ready spirit of helpfulness in both pleasure and sorrow, a kind of statesmanship for the good of all and the downfall of none. Later, money-raising entered into the parties in the name of churches and charities. This changed the spirit of social life, for temptation and little sins crept in—back-biting and false accusations that the love of money causes.

Lacking the harvests of great fields of corn, hog-raising was reduced to three or four hogs to a family. The last six weeks before butchering time they were fattened on apple peelings and pumice, melon rinds, small potatoes, buttermilk, pursley, weeds and vines, beets from the garden, turnip patches not needed for spring salad, and acorns, the main substitute for corn. There was less lard, but the meat was all usable and excellent.

All fruits and many vegetables were dried in the sun on nice home-made scaffolds for winter use: corn, squash and sweet potatoes. Peas and beans were dried on the vines, then spread on a large canvas on the floor, usually in the barn. The children were allowed to pull off their shoes and stockings and trample out the beans—which we accompanied with singing. This was fine fun for rainy and snowy winter days. We had delighted in this during slave days. Also before cooking, the beans had to be winnowed by hand. Persons using two pans would go out on windy days and pour the beans from one pan to the other holding one high in the air. Then the beans had to soak all night before they were used.

After the War the Southern families realized the inconvenience of the yard kitchens, so they moved lean-tos or cabins to the dining room chimneys. This convenience called for another necessity—a cooking stove. A factory had been opened in Richmond. Whoever could, bought stoves to the delight of the housekeepers. Several years later the stove patterns were improved to become ranges with hot-water backs and warming closets above, and burning coal or wood as desired.

Lacking fleet-footed runners, the next great need was to improve the spring-water system. Wells near the kitchen seemed to be the solution. The country was scoured for well-diggers who claimed to be able to locate a water vein by some form of necromancy. They walked over the site carefully a certain number of times, holding in their hands a leafy twig from a certain tree, willow, I think. By its movements they decided to dig or not to dig. Such superstition was laughable, but often practiced. The windlass with chain was laborious until motor pumps were invented later.

In our early history many owners of landed estates gave much attention to planting orchards and noteworthy plantings of trees and shrubs on their lawns, especially Thomas Jefferson of Monticello, General Cocke of Bremo, upper and lower, the Carys of Cary's Brook, Captain Tutwiler of Tutwiler's Mill and many other estates along the James and Rivanna Rivers. These noble-minded gentry wanted to encourage cultivation of orchards and beautifying homes. So they were very liberal with their seeds, scions and slips, many of which were from Europe, China and Japan—fruits, nuts, tropical flowers such as lotus and lily pads, camellias, rare evergreens, and ferns. They also furnished seed of improved wheat, oats, pasture grass for hay, and edible greens, seckel pears, wax cherries, green and yellow gage plums, choice peaches and apples in great variety. Due to their unselfish vision, a great industry later employed men to become florists, orchardists, pruners, fruit-grafters and naturalists. The blessings from these public-spirited citizens can not be over-estimated. Our Civil War veterans found their orchards neglected but still bearing the luscious fruit. It cheered them and helped to cure their wounds. They set to work to cultivate them as soon as they possibly could.

Methods for the preservation of fruits and vegetables were being introduced. First open crocks with salicilate over the top, tightly cloth-covered, were used; then glass jars without rubbers, only sealing wax—they were not very satisfactory. Then tin cans with a wax string proved very good. Then rubber rings for glass jars were introduced. Now other helps as pressure cookers and freezing plants are used—they must be the limit. What a wonderful era this new one is!

Slowly but progressively the Reconstruction period was rising from its ashes, so that by 1895 the time was spoken of as "the gay nineties." No people ever pulled through such a harrowing experience more bravely and determinedly to dedicate their efforts to high attainments in every field of knowledge, physically and spiritually.

CHAPTER III

Some Personal Notes on My Early Years

MY FATHER died when I was five months old. My Uncle William P. Snead was appointed as my guardian. This was done when my mother married for the second time (perhaps in 1860) her cousin who had been the overseer of the farm for several years. The slaves were opposed to having him as their master and never fully accepted his authority. My mother had to give orders to the head Negro man, Uncle Fred, who was capable and proud. My older brothers also opposed him. They left home in their teens having been employed by Captain Charley Snead as clerks in his stores in Georgia and Mississippi. Billy lived two years with Uncle William, went to private school with his boys until he was ready for clerking in Goochland County for a relative. I was convinced that second marriages are not desirable when there are children from the first marriage.

My maternal grandfather, William Snead, was a striking character. He had unquestioned faith in the Bible, was a strict church member, practiced the Golden Rule in all his dealings, was public-spirited, believed in progress and invention, was a successful farmer and a kindly master of his slaves, and had a pleasing sense of humor which gave him many admirers. The younger generations of Sneads have many of his funny expressions handed down to laugh over.

When Uncle Peter came to visit on his frequent week-ends he often shaved grandpa as a favor. Once he applied the lather too hot. Grandpa endured it quietly then said "Peter lay down your razor, pick them out with your fingers, you have scalded me".

Grandpa had a friend of good family who owned a small farm in the poor section of Mountain Hill. His stock had dwindled down to one horse and one cow. During a long cold winter he hitched his horse to his wagon, drove down to Grandpa's and said, "Billy, I have no feed for my horse so I have come to you for help." Grandpa looked at the horse carefully and said, "Vernon, he is dead, he just has to fall." But Grandpa filled the wagon with corn, oats, hay and fodder, and Vernon went happily home after dinner.

Grandpa had a boyhood friend who did not like to do chores around his home; he liked to make week-end visits to enjoy life with his friends. On one such visit to him Grandpa asked him suddenly, "Peter, who was the father of Zebedee's children?"

He answered, "I don't know, Billy, unless it was Job." He never saw the joke implied in the question.

When I was very young, about seven, Grandpa liked to have me stay with them. I could bring his pipe, slippers, cane and could comb his hair while he dozed in his armchair. I had to stand on a little stool to reach his head. I sometimes went with him to Saturday afternoon church meetings. It was fun to ride in a phaeton drawn by a big fat horse, driven by the houseman Tom. I suppose Grandpa was the chairman of the deacons as he sat in a chair and answered their questions. I sat in a corner of the pew and listened to them talk. Sometimes they got excited over things and all of them talked at once.

Once they talked about a member who would get drunk at intervals. They said, "Turn him out, he can't stand." Grandpa said, "Brethren, I think we should try Brother ——— another time." They said, "How many times must we keep doing that?" He answered, "Seventy times seven if he repents." They argued awhile but agreed to do it.

Another time they were talking about their pastor who wanted to marry a lady who was very delicate. They told him she would interfere with his church work and it would take so much medicine for her. The pastor stood up and said,"Brethren, I had rather have Sallie with all her infirmities than anyone else." Grandpa said, "Brethren, I think our pastor should be allowed to marry the woman he loves and wants," Again they argued awhile, but agreed. The pastor married her not very long after that and brought her to Grandpa's on a visit. I thought she was a lovely, sweet lady.

Grandpa was wise and always said the right thing in the right way.

Fork Union Church was so named for two reasons. It was built in the angle of four main roads, one to Palmyra, the county seat, one to Charlottesville with the University, one to Richmond, the capitol, and one to Bremo Bluff. The last two were boat landings on the James River, which was the main inland navigation route from the mountains to the sea both for passengers and shipments. In winter travel to these four points was handicapped by the "damn red mud" of Yankee fame.

The church was built by the Baptists and Episcopalians, aided by the few families of Methodists and Presbyterians of Fluvanna County. The first two had two Sunday morning services each. The other two had occasional afternoon services; they were too few to support a regular pastor. The Episcopalians came from their fine plantations on the James in handsome coaches attended by liveried servants. Using their prayer book rituals, they made a colorful contrast to the simple Baptist services. The Baptists lived so near they attended all the services. There was harmony and friendship among the members of each church faith.

The rector lived at Dixie. I recall him as a gentle white-haired man, much beloved by his Baptist neighbors and friends. Not very long after the War, the Baptists bought the interests of the Episcopalians in the church and later the Episcopalians built a chapel near Bremo.

Since this early remembrance of them, I have held the Episcopalians in high esteem. When I married and moved to Rockbridge County to live I was closely and pleasantly associated with them as near neighbors. I served as organist in their church for many years after "the boom." I was much attached to them as tried and true friends, whose memory is still dear to me. Most of them have passed to their rewards, while I am left. Is there some influence, some purpose I should fulfill which in my spiritual blindness I cannot divine? Each day I ask myself "What should I do that I am failing to do?" "Help thou my unbelief."

The first rural mail carrier we had in that section was Mr. Howell Herndon, a very striking character. He was proud of his government appointment. He was a small farmer who raised fine horses, and he ordered a special, large three-seated carryall with steps to set down for mounting, and a front corner for his mail bags. He equipped the carryall for taking passengers to add to his salary. It was an accommodation and he had much patronage. The seats were comfortable with springs, room for luggage under them. It was open-topped, but he had two large umbrellas handy in case of rain. He was an expert driver, using two fine swift horses which he handled in the most spectacular manner. It took skill to drive the narrow, winding Montecello road. When he overtook travelers he called out in a stentorian voice, "Clear the track; let the U. S. mail pass." That was a fearsome thing to do as the road ran along the very brink of the cliff, making you shiver to look down. He never had an accident during his long service to the public.

My father was an advocate of education; he had a college education and studied law, but never practiced at the bar. For years he was a school master in the homes of the rich families in Virginia. I can remember his law books from my earliest recollections. They were lost in three moves in my later life. His last school was at the Rectory at Dixie below Fork Union. His pupils were the young men of that neighborhood, the Gays, Joneses, Seays and Perkins and many others.

About that time he married my mother, bought a farm near

Central Plains, built a home and raised a family of seven, losing but two by death in childhood. At that time he stopped teaching.

I was only five months old at the time of his death. Had he lived I would have had a finished education for I inherited his love of books. He died of apoplexy. He had the stroke while attending court at Palmyra, was brought home, and lived only two days, dying the last day of May, 1856.

He was a successful farmer and had trained his head servant, Uncle Fred, so that he could carry on the work during my mother's widowhood. He was also a merchant and had a large dry-goods store at Central Plains in the brick building which was also the post office for that district. His partner was Mr. Jeff Noel who was the postmaster. The main room of this building is still standing; today it looks out upon smooth paved highways, where once red mud covered the hitching-posts and walk-ways. My father went every morning to his desk at Central Plains; he was book-keeper for the firm. His neighbors held him in high esteem, often asking his legal opinion in questions of their business.

We know very little about his family. His mother owned a plantation near Buckingham Courthouse. She was a widow at the time of his marriage. He took his bride there for the "infair" or what we later called "reception." She said they had several slaves and raised large crops. It is too bad that more of his family history was not left to us. Genealogy doesn't seem to have been much sought after in those days, and the War destroyed so many records at county courthouses.

The authority of churches at that day seemed to be a sort of court for the actions of its members. If one danced in public buildings, went to theatres, tent shows, circuses, got drunk, played cards, swore or told lies, he was threatened with "I am going to tell your pastor." The penalty was being called before the church officers and if necessary being turned out of church in great disgrace. Now the other extreme prevails. The members have freedom of conduct. It used to be a frequent but rather dreaded event for the preacher to come into the homes; much preparation had to be made for his entertainment.

Young children did not go to church in the old days as they could be safely left to the care of the slave mammies. When I started going with my parents I was often frightened by the strange actions of the pastor. He would come down from the pulpit, walk up the aisles, point at a child and say, "Don't you want to be a Christian? He is standing at the door of your heart knocking. Open the door and let Him in!" I did not know my heart had a door; Polly had never told me that. She had said that it was the seat of my life, and if it stopped beating I would be dead, and that I must not run too long and make it beat too fast for it might stop. I did not know what to do about the intangible things the preacher said; they scared me almost to death.

When I went with my sister's husband's family to the Methodist church, the pastor acted in much the same way. Often ladies danced in the aisles, clapping their hands and singing; this was called "shouting" because they were happy. The people seemed to enjoy the excitement and came in crowds to the church. This I suppose was the evangelistic period. It was certainly an emotional one. Perhaps this was a needed method to teach people to seek the Kingdom of God. It increased the membership of churches.

I can recall, about 1860, the excitement of discovering gold in a steep hill and creek at the bottom of Grandpa's farm. I went with Grandpa and my uncles to see the slaves washing frying-pans of dirt containing shiny specks in the stream running down the hill into troughs. The last pan had a lot of gold flakes you could take up in your hand. It was a long way across the fields and gulleys; my uncles picked me up most of the way.

They had a big machine that sounded like a sawmill. Lots of people went to work and to watch there every day. I don't know how much gold was mined, but the family had chains and rings made. My Uncle George had a long double watch chain from which he later cut off a chain for my neck, and Grandma gave me a plain band ring which I wore for years. I can't recall what finally became of the gold mine. I heard them say that the vein extended to a joining farm which I think belonged to Mr. Robert Hughes' family.

I know the next excitement was getting ready for the War. This caused a much bigger stir as everybody seemed to be taking part—so much talking together of the neighbors and the passing of a weekly newspaper from Richmond from family to family.

Then later came several young men, friends and beaux of my sister Helen, gaily dressed, some of them with plumes on their hats, and riding fine horses. They were singing and laughing and saying goodbye to the family and to her. I watched them gallop over the hill looking so grand and gay. How different was the return of only a remnant—like the "gallant six hundred" of earlier days in Europe.

Sister Helen was married the second year of the War, after having a hard time deciding between two suitors. Mr. James Noel of Fluvanna County, near Palmyra, and Mr. Burch of Albemarle County. She married Mr. Noel, who was a domineering character fond of outdoor sports, fox-hunting, mainly. He had a kennel of fox hounds that barked a lot at night. Her tastes were different from his; she was fond of music, parlor company, fine sewing and making pretty clothes. Mr. Burch was much more in keeping with her disposition.

Mr. Noel came from the War on a marriage furlough. His parents, Captain and Mrs. Noel, were devoted Christians, observing strictly the rules of the Methodist church, having family prayers both night and morning, and grace for each meal. His brother, Richard Noel, was clerk of the County for many years. He died while holding this office, a very talented, popular citizen.

My uncle, Willis Thomas, took entire charge of her wedding. He said he never felt so sorry for a man as for Mr. Burch in his great disappointment. I recall Helen's going to Scottsville with my mother for the wedding clothes to be made up. Confederate money was depreciating, making goods costly. The material for the wedding dress, black silk alpaca—to be trimmed in red velvet—was fifty dollars a yard. The colored seamstress of the family did the cutting and fitting. Her associates of the neighbors came every day to help with the sewing—so much ruffling to be rolled and hemmed, so much linen to be hem-stitched for collars and cuffs and underwear. But they had a gay time, laughing and sewing.

She was married in the big, old parlor, filled with relatives and neighbors. For a short time the War was forgotten and gaiety reigned. Rice was showered, healths were drunk, and all was gladness. They lived with his parents who became very fond of her, and she of them. She absorbed much of their piety during her eleven years of life with them.

Her health began to fail while she was still young. She came home often and I stayed with them often when I was not off at boarding school. The last few months of her sickness with tuberculosis, she came home to our family physician, Doctor Lambert, and said she wanted to die in the little room of her childhood. She seemed so willing to die, talked about going to Heaven as one would anticipate a much desired trip somewhere. She told Mother she wanted a headstone bearing these words, "A sinner saved by Grace." A neighbor carpenter made the board of hard wood painted white and lettered the sentence in black.

Some years afterward I went back to visit the old graveyard, and I could hardly find the section. The headboard had crumbled into dust. As I stood where it had stood, I wondered if even one person had been touched and saved by reading that Christian passage during the many years it had stood through sunshine and storms. If so, how well worth doing, "For there is joy in Heaven over one soul that repenteth." Is that why we are to give an account of "the deeds done in the body" at the final judgment? Think of the millions of forgotten deeds, both good and bad; how can they be recalled? Time with God is limitless. "A thousand years in His sight are but as yesterday when it is past." Personal influence is such a circulating power, we seldom catch up with it, but it remains after life itself is ended. If only we could leave signposts that would help and not hinder people in their search for God, we would not have lived in vain.

CHAPTER IV

My School Days—Studying and Teaching

WHEN I was about six years old I went with my big brothers to a private school taught by Schoolmaster George Hudgins in a big one-room school house near Central Plains on Uncle Willis' land. It was co-ed, with all ages of classes from the primer to the grown boys' Latin grammar classes. The one-plank-back benches were high above the floor so I had to be jumped up to my seat for a while. I progressed rapidly and was soon called a good speller and could trap my older class-mates and stand at the head most of the time. I was among the first of my class to need a slate and pencil for our cyphering.

The hours were from eight-thirty in the morning until four in the afternoon with two fifteen minute recesses for the little students, one for the whole school and a one-hour recess at noon. Every student or each family of students carried a topped lunch basket to be hung on a wooden peg on the wall—also the shoulder knapsack for books. Slates were left in a big desk with your name plainly written on each.

At one end of the room was a large fireplace for burning six-foot logs of wood. Near this was a small platform for the teacher's desk and chair, and a high mantel with a big round clock. At the other end of the room was a narrow staircase to an upstairs rafter room where the girls could play on rainy days. Under the stairs was a closet with pegs for hanging wraps; also a shelf for the bucket of water and a hanging tin dipper and a slop bucket for undrunk water. A man janitor came every afternoon to make ready for the next day. We had some sanitary rules; we had to use sponges for our slates, and wash our hands after eating and play times.

Spelling and reading well were emphasized. The senior class using McGuffey's Advanced Speller was most entertaining. They would stand in a line reaching clear across the room and spell words of eight or ten syllables, and pronounce each syllable and give a correct pronounciation of the whole word at the end. It was almost musical, given in so many pitches and tones. Misspellings were regarded as almost disgraceful, and it was hard for many of the boys. There was an old axiom quoted that was quite upsetting to a poor speller: "To spell well is no great honor, but to spell badly is a great dishonor." Sometimes the teacher would read letters he had received with misspelled words; one I remember was, "Tom has stuffed his toe into his gun with the ramrod." The teacher asked how to spell "tow" and several said "toe" and were laughed down. Another was "My cake is all dow." He asked how to spell "dough," and got some wrong answers.

Besides the spelling, we had classes in ten words from the dictionary with the meanings to be memorized; that was hard. One big boy learned "acephalous," without a head; he took the last two syllables as part of the meaning, saying the word meant "a louse without a head." He was laughed to shame.

Individual reading aloud was emphasized with faults pointed out and corrected by the teacher. The War later put an end to the schools taught by capable masters as the boys of seventeen were conscripted. Sherman said we "robbed the cradle and the grave."

The next type of school to be founded was the Home Boarding School accommodating about twenty-five girls and having day pupils. Three or four teachers were employed. All branches of English, Latin, French, mathematics, history, geography and music were taught. The proprietor and his wife had to be prominent church members, capable of presiding at the table with good manners, and able to keep an eye on the girls' behavior outside of class rooms.

When I was twelve years of age, my guardian placed me in Fluvanna Institute, near Winnsville. The teachers were two married couples. The men were college graduates and were excellent instructors. I was delighted with my opportunities. I was a good student because I was eager to know what the books were about. I could feel my mind develop with every new thought. After two sessions the school was abandoned for lack of money and the pressure of the Reconstruction period.

The building, a large beautiful one, had been built by the notable Henson family. The father, John Henson, had come as a young man from Boston and established his trade. He was a fine cabinet maker, and his furniture was eagerly bought by the neighbors and friends. My father purchased a bureau, a high boy, a wardrobe and small tables from him. He was a Whig or Republican and was sent to the House as representative for one term. The Snead boys told many funny tales about him. He was at the Capitol when the floor gave way and fell; he escaped up the chimney, unhurt, while many were injured. He had a very gifted son Poindexter, a great orator, who was graduated in Theology at Boston and became a famous clergyman of Philadelphia. He married a Southern woman. When his two children were young, he said he had to move them North so they could learn to "talk and walk correctly." That amused the Sneads greatly. The family lived on the grounds of Fluvanna Institute.

The county was very proud of Poindexter Henson; whenever he came home on visits he was delegated to preach and lecture and drew immense crowds. He was certainly made a "lion," and was eminently fitted for it.

His brother Judson, a lesser light, but well educated, taught a private school at Winnsville after the Institute failed. I went to his school. He specialized in grammar and rhetoric. I enjoyed and learned so much under him. He gave us this rule: if a sentence cannot be grammatically parsed, it is incorrect.

My next school was Roberts' Home School. Mr. Roberts was a retired Baptist minister who had married Miss Ann Maria Thomas of Fork Union, a sister of Uncle Willis Thomas. Mr. Roberts owned a large farm in Nelson County near Rockfish Depot—a railroad had been built from Richmond by Charlottesville to the Blue Ridge counties. My guardian, fully approving of the proprietors, entered me as a student. It seemed like a distant trip and exciting adventure for me, since I had never left my county. I was taken to Central Plains to be driven on from there by the noted mail carrier, Mr. Herndon, who carried the mail from there to Charlottesville every day. He took me pompously to Cousin Luther Snead's door. I spent the night there before taking the train the next day for Rockfish Depot.

As I had never seen the railroad and train, Cousin Luther proposed we go to the station ten minutes ahead of time to let me "see the iron horse come in and get used to the big noise." In great excitement he led me to my seat, giving me directions for getting off and putting me in charge of the conductor, who was kind and friendly. Thus I started on my first venture into the big future, away from home and county.

Prudent, or prudish, women advised young girls not to talk with strange men on trains or public vehicles as they might be wicked seducers. What happened to me was that on the seat in front of mine sat a distinguished looking man of pleasing face and manner who very soon engaged me in conversation. He was returning to Maryland from Italy and Switzerland. He said the beautiful Blue Ridge reminded him of the mountains he had just traveled through in Europe. He talked so interestingly of our mountains, pointing out any lovely features we passed. He asked my destination, talked with interest about my proposed studies and told me of books that would be helpful to me for reading. When I came to my station, he rose, took my hand-bags, escorted me down the steps to the waiting room and said he had enjoyed my company. I decided that talking with strange men was educational rather than wicked.

This school was located in lovely mountain scenery with a broad view of Rockfish Valley. There were fifteen boarding students, also day pupils. There were two women teachers, one a young widow. Their little jealousies were sometimes unpleasant, but always amusing to the students.

We had happy times visiting in excellent families in the county. There were several nice young men visitors to the school girls. The young widow sought to come into our group, but the boys shied around her. My first formal beau was handsome Presley Thornton whose sister Mary was a close friend of mine. Presley was gay and sporty in dress and manner, seeking fun but no responsibility. I was indifferent to him; that provoked his vanity and made him very attentive—but beaux were not in my mind, only books and school. He wrote to me in his lovely Spencerian style for several months, then fell away.

My next school was White Rock on the Rivanna, near Cary's Brook. There were two women teachers: Cousin Nannie Cleveland taught English and French, and Miss Sue Winder of Portsmouth taught mathematics and Latin, with music as her specialty. Dr. Snead gave blackboard lectures on anatomy and hygiene two days a week. I appreciated my opportunities for music and progressed rapidly. Every Saturday we were taught vocal music by Mr. John Nick Perkins who trained quite a good little choir among the students. We were often allowed to sing in the noted choir at Fork Church. He was a talented teacher and did so much to develop the musical ability of that and other communities in the County. He was a benefactor who enjoyed sharing his profession with others. His memory should be lovingly commemorated; "Verily he shall receive his reward."

I have been told that when my sister Helen was about fifteen years old, my father bought for her an imported rose-wood piano of unusual style, resembling a refectory table. A large carved rod about seven feet long was fastened into a bow-leg at each end and had two brass pedals in the center. It had a sweet, clear, melodious tone. It became mine when I was old enough to take lessons. I practiced on it for many years. It was the first piano in that immediate neighborhood.

My next and finishing school was Albemarle Female Institute at Charlottesville. My opportunities here were excellent as all senior branches were taught by professors from the University. The music department was headed by the famous pianist Miss Zitella Cocke of New Orleans. The classes in English literature and the history of Rome went every two weeks to the University to hear lectures on the famous painting "The School of Athens," whose characters we studied in Latin and ancient history.

I was very happy in my favored lot and studied diligently.

Unfortunately I lacked another session for full graduation. My guardian said my funds were exhausted and I could begin teaching. It was a great regret to me; I always felt like an unfinished garment. I thought I might teach a year and send myself to college, but teaching in a private family at a small salary was uphill and shattered my hopes for a finished education.

I believe sending me to different schools was a mistake. If I had been placed in a standard institution like Hollins for the same length of time, my education would have been broader and more complete. But our foresight is always hidden in the school of experience. We have to live blindly in order to learn. Even now near the close of life, I wish I had knowledge of the subjects I did not finish. Perhaps our earthly life is meant to be unfinished; only in eternity is perfection found. We just don't know how to prepare here for that unspeakable knowledge and perfect joy freed from mistakes.

Since I could not return to College, I had to think of teaching school. I advertised in the Religious Herald at Richmond for "teacher or governess in a private family." That was something new since those positions had been filled by Northern women before the War; but we were standing now on a different footing and must needs work for ourselves.

From my three replies I selected the one from Rockingham County. It seemed a distant place for me to go, but I thought I would get more experience a long way from home. It was in the home of Dr. Amiss, a physician. He wrote me to come to Harrisonburg, spend the night at a certain hotel, and that the proprietor would send me the next day by private conveyance to his house. The colored porter drove me in a buggy with a fleet horse about eighteen miles up the Valley of Virginia toward Winchester through the most beautiful country I had ever seen: droves of fine cattle and horses in meadows knee-deep in clover and hay, and great blue mountains and rushing streams.

We forded the Shenandoah River three times and went through several flourishing villages, spotless and attractively kept. We went to Waverly, a mining town with large iron foundries on one side and big farms on the other. We were directed to a large, beautiful house on a hill. It had a large yard of three terraces with low iron fencings, a big portico and steps in front. The downstairs halls and parlor had frescoed ceilings in a lovely rose pattern.

I felt small and perhaps incapable, entering this magnificent dwelling without any experience in teaching. The family was kind and friendly, showing good breeding and putting on no superior aires.

There were four children, ages six to sixteen, two girls and two boys. They had been taught by the parents and a dentist uncle, who had spent two winters in the home while studying. He had gone away to open his office in a town, so the parents had decided to employ a governess.

The next morning we looked over the childrens' books, decided on new studies and ordered Maury's Geographies, newer editions of grammar, arithmetic and algebra books. Cora, the oldest child, had started Latin grammar, and they were much pleased to have her begin French and music. Dr. Amiss ordered a piano from Harrisonburg. He had a nice two-room office in the yard; one contained his medicines for prescriptions. He moved his office into that room and fitted the vacated one for a schoolroom. They wanted school from nine to twelve in the morning and one-thirty to three-thirty in the afternoon. This went on every day by clock-work. They seemed to approve my methods without any suggestions or complaints. The children were obedient and pleased to have a companion of their own. We took walks in the afternoons and played games, of which they had plenty.

Dr. Amiss had a lucrative practice; the rich Northern families who owned and worked the big iron foundries were his patients. The near neighbors were Dutch and German. They were thrifty and could pay their bills.

Mrs. Amiss did very little visiting. She did not mingle with the near neighbors and only occasionally exchanged calls with the iron industrialists. She often had house guests from a distance. Her relatives were from Kentucky. Her mother was the daughter of a prominent Confederate general of that state; they were elegant people, Episcopalians.

Soon after my arrival they asked what my denomination was. They asked whether I belonged to the Old or New school. Not knowing there were two branches, I thought it safer to answer the New school. They replied, "The Baptists here are Hard-shell." I was glad I had not joined myself with them! I had never heard the name, but guessed from their tone it was of small repute. I made a lucky choice.

There was a Methodist church about six miles away in a pretty little village, to which we went at Christmas. The pastor was named Dr. Hammond. He was a good preacher and very cordial. He insisted on our going to his parsonage for dinner. Such an elegant dinner, a large turkey with all the fixings, and a large plum pudding was brought lighted to the table. The table was beautifully furnished with white linen napery and lovely china. We spent the afternoon and got home at dark.

During the spring I was there a wonderful discovery was made near the boundary of Dr. Amiss' farm at the foot of a pretty mountain peak. A huntsman's hound chased a rabbit into a small hole cleverly hidden by limestone rocks and brush. He stooped and with the butt of his gun made the opening large enough to get his head in. Way below he saw a large room with beautiful stalactites shining in the half-dark. Excitedly he collected three or four neighbors. They pecked holes until they were convinced it was a very large cave. They carried the news to the village grocery store, from there it flew on wings, and soon gangs of men gathered and studied what machinery to get for developing it. Excitement ran high for weeks, and the property was discussed and measured for ownership. When I left they had named it Luray Caverns, which rapidly became famous as the most intricate and beautiful of them all. It was several months before it was open to the public. I have often wished that I could have seen it. It must have been discovered about 1872 or 1873.

On June 1 Dr. and Mrs. Amiss and Cora drove me to Harrisonburg and put me on my train for home. I was bringing the first money I had ever earned—one hundred and thirty-five dollars for nine months. I thought that was a fair price for my first venture. I felt that I had made a success and really enjoyed my teaching. I strove to make the studies interesting and pleasing, and my students had advanced rapidly. They told me they thought it was time to send Cora to college; she had no associates her age and needed to be getting into society. They sent her the next fall to an Institute in Winchester. She wrote me from there that she easily went into the advanced classes there because I had taught her so well. I was much devoted to her.

In that "garden spot of Virginia" where vegetation flourished, grew the delicious valley pippin apple. Dr. Amiss wanted them used plentifully in every day diet. He had four large barrels stored in his cold cellar for the winter. That was the fore-runner of the later slogan, "An apple a day, keeps the doctor away." We had deep snows that winter, but none of the family had serious colds. It was clear bracing cold that was not unbearable for outdoor playing. The only bad thing in that section was the limestone water, but Dr. Amiss had two cisterns kept in good order so we didn't have to drink the limestone.

When I got back home my mother said with positive conviction, "I can not let you go away again, we were too lonesome. I have engaged four pupils for you. The neighbors want you to teach at home." She and my young half-brother only were left at home. I could see how lonely they had been through the long winter.

Sure enough, I found I could get twelve desirable pupils in walking distance at three dollars each a month—if two or three from a family, two dollars each. So all summer we planned for the school at the farm. We decided on the half-story upstairs room over the big parlor. Uncle Willis found some benches and desks he had used in the private school on his land. The neighbors gave advice and help, so in the fall I started my home school with ten girls and two small boys under comfortable conditions. I gave music lessons on the old piano. With fifty dollars of my "Valley money" I bought a small parlor organ, partly for developing my half-brother's bass voice in connection with the Saturday singing school lessons taught at Fluvanna church first by Mr. Faris, then by Mr John Nick Perkins with the black-board and tuning fork. That was good fun.

There was no church organ until two years later, by that time we had trained a very creditable choir, four of my girls for soprano and alto, my half-brother and Marion Thomas for basses and White Hughes, who was clerking at Mr. Burgess' store at Central Plains, made a good tenor. They served faithfully for five years until I married and left the County.

With my first home session money I bought a new square piano in Richmond. My school grew in popularity. The second session I decided to take three boarding students from Monday to Friday—Nellie Noel, Willie Smith and Emma Snead. This met the food expenses for the family. I hired a good cook; my mother did all the housekeeping. So I was free to teach and give recitals.

My patrons were much pleased with the progress of their children. I was grateful for my success and greatly enjoyed my work. I realized it was an advantage to the girls who otherwise would have had small opportunities as the public schools were not acceptable to the best people until long afterward.

During the years of my home school I taught a class of teenage boys in Sunday School at Fluvanna Church, which interested me greatly. In those early church schools there was such a dearth of literature. It was hard to hold the interest of the students with only the Bible. I puzzled how to get books to entertain them. We had a well educated, capable church member; I talked with him and at once he seemed interested. He said he would spend that week visiting the old families, some of whom had excellent libraries, and ask the gift of books. He was very successful, getting a great many volumes suitable for different ages—some sets of books were for older boys, a boon to my class. Mr. Ben Sowell gave a tall, glass-door bookcase which was fine. He also agreed to be librarian, and a competent one he was—so the Sunday School gained both a library and an efficient church worker. Mr. Sowell married Miss Norella Seay, daughter of Capt. George Seay of Mt. Airy. His son was in my Sunday School class—an attractive, serious young fellow who, at about the age of twenty-one was sent as a missionary to South America—Peru, I believe. Mary Sowell and Olivia Cleveland drove in a buggy to my school. If I make any mis-statements it is due to time and space of memory since those far-away days.

Among the volumes were two or three hard, learned books. Dante's "The Divine Comedy" which is written as a vision of "Hell or Purgatory and Heaven," the highest knowledge of philosophy, history, morals and religion in most beautiful language. What an honor he was to his country, Italy! His descriptions were so vivid you felt them.

The most exciting book was Darwin's "The Origin of Species." He was a naturalist and gave years of study to prove in his famous work that species of plant and animal life are evolved from other species, and that this is natural or "the survival of the fittest in the struggle for life." This great doctrine of evolution stirred the country to its depths; it became world-wide. It was violently attacked and defended almost to blows, especially in the South. At length it was accepted by all the great scientists, and lesser scholars had to accept it though they thought it was hard to swallow! I recall a little joke appearing in newspapers at the time of its hottest discussion. A little boy was enrolled at school, and the first two days he was pleased and happy. The third day he came home excited over the talk and dispute he heard at school. He asked his mother, "Am I descended from a monkey?" After a minute she said, "I don't know for sure, Bobby, I have not seen all your father's kinfolks."

The pictures in Darwin's book are striking and often repulsive. What a fertile mind he had! rich in knowledge. Literature describes him as having "kindliness of character, devotion to truth, and attachment to his friends." He was born at Shrewsbury, England, in 1809.

I have passed through the period of church denominational feud. How bitter were their accusations, how strong their prejudices, amounting almost to hatred between differing friends. Of course the Baptists got the hardest licks as they stood alone on the two points: baptism by immersion, and rejection of infant baptism. Slowly the feud spent itself, time and individual attachments softened the "het-up" feelings. And since denomination is not essential to salvation and counts nothing in the great Judgment, it was laid on the shelf, one hopes, never to be revived.

Religious novels like "Grace Truman," "Lena Rivers," "Ten Nights in a Barroom" and many others played a pleasing part as they were eagerly read by the parents of families, and their ruffled feelings calmed until they could see the necessity of fellowship between Christians of differing faiths.

It is interesting to study how the Christian religion born of World War II will affect this vast new generation's beliefs and actions. Their entire home-training in the value of human life was reversed when they were rushed into those heathernish scenes of torture and slaughter. They were young, bewildered; every high ideal shattered. It is obliged to affect and dictate their ideas of future living. If only they can turn in faith to God; but no good thing can come out of war.

When I was about sixteen I had been invited to go with a young girl friend, Annie Goodwin, to visit her great uncle who lived in Lynchburg— Mr. Linwood Lucado of a highly respected family which my mother knew well. She thought I should take this nice trip so she made ready for me to go. It was so exciting for us two girls to be going unattended, riding on one of those handsome packet-boats! We were driven to Scottsville to take the nine A. M. boat from Richmond. It was exciting to have passengers get on at all the landings along the canal. They were interesting people of all ages. How thrilling to go through the locks! of which there were six, I think. The lock-keepers lived in small houses close to the canal. Their business was to open the flood gates for each vessel. The boat mounted up on rushing water then glided down to its level again. It was breath-taking!

We arrived at Lynchburg landing at nine P. M. that night. We were met by a two-horse carriage and driven up a long hill to Church Street. I can still recall the sound of those horses' iron shoes on those cobble streets. It was the occasion of the Southern Methodist Conference meeting in Lynchburg at the Court Street Church to which the Lucadoes belonged. They entertained some of the prominent ministers.

It was also the occasion of an awful freshet in the James after two days and nights of continued rainfall in the Blue Ridge Mountains. When the flood reached Lynchburg the next afternoon the whole city seemed gathered on the river bank watching the angry waters, bringing great trees, lumber, wheat stacks, small houses and cattle before it, destroying everything movable, flooding all the houses on the bank. Mr. Lucado, who owned a large warehouse filled with valuable freight, had to hire men to vacate the first floors. We heard and saw the big passenger bridge connecting the city with Amherst fall into the waters with a loud crash. The canal was so badly destroyed there was no traffic for a long time.

The packet-boat company somehow arranged with the railroad to take its flood-bound passengers to Charlottesville so they could reach their homes from there. We rode home with the obliging mail-carrier. We had much to tell after such an exciting experience.

The canal was restored by using all available laborers including the convicts of the state. This happy leisurely travel went on until 1877 when another and worse freshet came and the canal never fully recovered. Times were changing, there were some jealousies, business disputes and lawsuits against the canal company. Railroads were being talked up; so by 1880 the James and Kanawha property was sold to the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad Company. Gone forever were the lovely moonlight rides on the deck of the packet, the happy song of the boatman, the soft swish of the water against the boat, the regular clop, clop of the horses' feet on the firm tow-path. The latter became the perfect bed on which the railroad ties were laid at small cost. Progress had stepped in, a new era had begun.

Those were happy years spent in Fluvanna—years with true friends and devoted pupils. Even now I can feel the tug of the heart when I recall our parting of the ways. Surely our life is a journey—we linger awhile by the wayside, then fold our tents and pass on to new scenes and events.

CHAPTER V

New Scenes and Events

I WENT happily on with my teaching for four or five years until my suitor, Dr. John Cleveland, grew importunate about our getting married. I had encouraged him to study medicine during those years. When he came back from college he insisted that now was the accepted time. I was in the middle of my session and wanted to wait until June, but he argued that spring plowing must be done early on the farm, so I agreed to close my school and be married on March 8, 1883. I continued my music lessons, however.

We were married in the big parlor. We walked across the dining room and the open passage which my grown pupils had decorated with running cedar and woods violets. We had only the nearest relatives, who filled the room together with my girls, three of whom were bridesmaids. Lula Snead from Charlottesville was maid of honor. The best man was Beckwith Hughes. Dr. Snead was the clergyman, and he used the ring service, which put the groom and best man in terror of dropping the ring, but all went well.

The ceremony was at ten in the morning. We had to drive five miles over rather rough roads to Tutwiler's Mill to meet the twelve-thirty train to Richmond. Three or four buggies went along for the fun of a bridal party. As we passed Kidd's store the porch was full of loafers and customers who threw up their hats with handfuls of rice and big yells. I was married in my traveling dress; the color was called "terra cotta" and it was trimmed in velvet of the same shade with hat to match.

My best trousseau dress was black bengaline silk—lovely quality, selected by the expert salesman, Mr. Edwin Archer Winn, from his leading store, Price and Company, in Richmond. It was made with shirred panniers or "angel wings" and trimmed in black Spanish lace; it had shirred yoke and sleevetops. I also had a dark blue dress of serge, trimmed in contrasting blue velvet. It was made in an apron over the skirt style, and this was edged with jet fringe. And I had a blue felt hat with a peacock blue feather. It was stunning.

My dresses were beautifully made by the two ladies of the Winston family who had moved near Central Plains three years before from near Richmond. They were city dressmakers. Their home had been destroyed by the War—they were called "broken-down aristocracy." They were fine people, and they had made my clothes during my teaching period. It was the period of elaborate sewing, of ruffles, fine laces and ruchings for necks and sleeves. Some dresses were marvels of handwork and becoming in style. Women studied to be "fine birds in fine feathers." Art was being revived in this growing restoration.

Our hotel in Richmond was the Old Ford, situated in the residential section in a grove of big oak trees. It had two long porches, benches and chairs under the trees, and was a restful place for old couples. Friendly chat went on in the dining room between the tables set close together. The rooms were heated by a coal grate in each room. The water was furnished in large pitchers. Carpets were over the whole floors, even halls and steps—but it was of a thinner grade than before the War.

The next day I dressed in my wedding black silk, and we went out to study the photograph galleries. Doctor had gone down to Richmond to buy his wedding suit from the Oppenheimer house, which he knew well. He insisted on getting the style just coming into favor: Prince Albert. It was of black broadcloth with broad tails coming nearly to his knees. He was large and tall enough to sustain the tails with dignity. A friend of his from Buena Vista saw us while we had on our wedding garments and said it was the "handsomest couple that ever stood before a parson!" Ha! Ha! I wore my hair in ringlets plastered flat around my forehead; the boys always called them "beau-catchers." They were stylish but not very becoming to a round face. It was considered smart to be stylish!

After the picture making we called on my Uncle John Newton Snead's family. He had handsome, bright children, and I had often stayed with them between school sessions. I was very fond of Aunt Kate.

We then went to a building of interesting architecture which was being repaired to be made into the Confederate Museum. They were collecting relics of that struggle. They were also preparing a home for old and disabled soldiers. It made me sad to see so many scars of war on the face of the city—a monument to the uselessness and distress of war, which is never helpful.

The next day we went to the big furniture stores to purchase a suite for our bed chamber. We decided on a dark mahogony color, marble-top, five-piece set. We next went to a beautiful china and crockery store for a washstand set and bought an attractive pink moss rose, six piece set.

We spent four days in the city for our honeymoon! Even that was regarded as a very nice bridal trip at that time.

We took the train back to the same station. Ira met us at seven in the evening and drove us home. Mother had a nice supper for us. She had moved a bed and wash-stand into the parlor for our room temporarily.

We had decided to remodel the house for easier heating; it was too rambling. We took down the old dining room with its half-story above and put a second story with two upstairs rooms. We turned the open passage into a stairway and front hall, joined to the parlor. It made a convenient and attractive house. We had good, swift carpenters who finished it in about three months.

Doctor sold the Cleveland home to Mr. Lonnie Lucado who married his youngest sister and lived there. He then bought my brothers' shares and my mother's dowry, and with my share he owned my old home and farm. He hired a dependable Negro man who with two farm horses did very good farming and gardening.

He had built a small drug-store and office at Central Plains for his own prescriptions and also for Dr. Bledsoe's, who had been his "patron saint" and had pursuaded him to study medicine with him for two years before going to college. Dr. Bledsoe then taught him practically by taking him to see the patients for the last 6 months. Dr. Bledsoe lived in Scottsville and had a very large practice in three directions. They rode every day or night in the regulation style of horses with saddle-bags or in a buggy. It was a valuable experience for my doctor who strove to benefit from the kind efforts in his behalf.

At once I became interested in the Doctor's medical studies, especially his medical journals. When he was tired from long rides, I could read to him and help him with the Latin phrases in which his books abounded. I realized the War had prevented his getting good school groundwork as schools were disrupted for so long. There were several kindred subjects in which I could help educate him: the origin and use of plants for medicinal purposes, the mental and moral philosophy. He studied motives and reactions toward diseases both real and imaginary. He said, "Often reasoning and interest do more good than pills. It diverts their minds from themselves and broadens their viewpoint." He said it was amazing to him how much the trend of man's mind influenced his character. The Bible says, "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he."

We entertained a traveling dentist for two weeks at the farm while he plied his trade on friends and neighbors. This was a much needed accommodation. He was Dr. Wills who had married my school-mate Nettie Thomas. Dr. Wills had improved equipment and was a skillful practitioner. This period marked the visiting of trained or graduated dentists into the rural school districts.

After two years my first baby was born; that gave me a new object in life. I thought her lovely; but how could I meet the problem of raising and teaching her properly! I found that growing love gave me the instinct and zest, and my mother gave me experience and help.

Public schools were coming into favor. Educated and capable men had been elected superintendents of county schools. James O. Shepherd of Fluvanna County studied to find and appoint good principals. That fall Miss Rebecca Cleveland had been appointed to open a public school at Central Plains. She found she needed another teacher for the older students who wanted Latin and some higher English branches. They appealed to me to help them out. I finally decided to try it in spite of a young baby.

I took a short examination to meet the law. Then I drove every morning with Doctor as he went to his office, back home for twelve-thirty lunch, and back to school until three-thirty. I nursed the baby the last thing before leaving in the morning. Coming home, I stepped form the buggy, unbuttoning my dress as I hurried up the walk; I saw her eager face in her grandmother's arms at the front window.

She kept well and grew fast under this program until Christmas. They had not found a suitable substitute teacher and insisted on my finishing the session. We decided it would be too disagreeable to keep on as we were doing, and baby was older and needed more frequent feeding. Mr. Burgess had a large three-room cottage at Central Plains he had built for a tenant. We moved into this for the remaining five school months, taking the square piano. I had given my old piano to the Irving girls who were my pupils. We had a very successful session. I felt I had given my teen-agers, tall grown-up boys and girls, a good start in their course. "Miss Beck" was very efficient in every way.

That summer Mr. John R. Williams, owner of the Buckingham Slate Quarries at Arvonia, sent Beck Hughes and an official of the company to Central Plains to offer Doctor the position of resident physician to the families of the slate quarry workers. This was a good position and we decided to move. It took a month to rent the farm, close business and get away.

The colony of workers were Welsh—born to slate quarrying in their native land. Most of them spoke broken English and sounded very foreign. They were anxious to become American citizens and sent their children to the public schools. They had their own church and Welsh ministers. They were lovers of music; they had lovely voices. Their mass singing of dignified, rather mournful style was beautiful, particularly their funeral services. The young people had a large glee club and sang their native aires, some of which were gay and beautiful. In the years since, they have intermarried with the American neighbors and I imagine have lessened the lines of their demarkation and different customs.

Two of the four Williams brothers had lived and prospered in Richmond. They had married the Hutchinson twin sisters there, bought the slate quarries, imported their countrymen, and set up a permanent business there. When they learned I was a teacher, they insisted eagerly on my opening a private school for their families. I had six Williams children, their sister's two boys, Owen and Stanley Morris, and Larry Pitts. My Lida was granted her request to come; she classed with Larry and Tom in the primer. How ambitious she was to excel them. It was too funny! The last year Ethel Burgess and Finley Jennings from Fluvanna boarded with us and went to my school.

I greatly enjoyed my three years of living and teaching at Arvonia; My patrons were cooperative and appreciative; my pupils were interesting and lovable. My mother managed the domestic affairs, and we had a good cook from Central Plains. Doctor was successful in his practice. The Welsh had great faith in him.

While living at Arvonia we had a visit from Brother Sam Cleveland from Covington, Kentucky, his daughter Isabel and her little son Billie. He was a very interesting man, a student of English and American history and a genealogist. He had been a Unionist during the War and had had stirring and dangerous experiences. He was strong for his family name and ancestry.

We also had a visit from my brother Granville of Georgia. He brought Mother a beautiful canary in a brass cage. In changing trains he had left the cage at a station. He missed it as soon as he was seated and rushed to the conductor and begged him to back the train. He said he could not; Granville pleaded with him. The conductor looked at his schedule, then reversed the train. Granville jumped off and grabbed the cage. Out of breath he raced back onto the train. He said this was the run of his life.

This decade was marked by bitter discussions over money standards by the two political parties. The long Republican rule was broken by the election of Grover Cleveland who strove to stabilize the gold standards. The next election put the Republicans back. The coining of silver had been prohibited, but free silver coining was the issue introduced by William Jennings Bryan in 1896. Part of the time all public bills were paid in gold, especially to railroad employees. Currency still unsettled, a great depression came during Cleveland's second term with a panic on Wall Street. Public salaries were again cut. Railroad laborers received only ninety cents a day. They bravely worked on until a silver lining slowly came into view. These depressions seem only minor when we read that Europe and England now are needing bread, clothes and warmth.

The year 1890 is remembered in several sections of Virginia as boom-building year, especially in piedmont and southwest Virginia. Business men formed joint-stock companies, bought certain acres of land and proceeded to lay out town sites. The lots were sold for building homes and factories at big public auction days made popular by furnishing free dinners and band music to the crowds. Men bought lots like hot cakes. They really lost their heads in the excitement of speculation. The sellers sent out agents to nearby and some distant towns to look up buyers and get them enthused to come to the lot sales. I recall a day of increased excitement.

The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough were touring the Southern States. They stopped for a few days at Natural Bridge and were invited to attend the auction sale at Glasgow, where I was living. Even these dignified Britishers caught the bidding infection, bought a lot and paid half cash as the terms required. That added good fuel to the fire and many lots were sold that day in the prospective town.

The site of Glasgow had been discovered in the seventeenth century by two explorers, Peter Sallings and John Lewis. The former settled, lived and died here as shown by his tombstone still barely legible. John Lewis went further north and founded the town of Staunton. As time went on other settlers came to this valley. Miss Elizabeth Glasgow of the Lexington family married Mr. Johns, acquired the land, built a brick mansion here, giving it her maiden name and using its fertile acres as a fine farm.

Here, I must relate that my husband had bought a lot, built a house and a drugstore and moved his family from Arvonia to Glasgow to live and grow up with the town. In the very beginning of the boom he, Mr. John Williams and Mr. Pitts went up from Arvonia to inspect the site. They found it beautiful for situation, very accessible with two railroads bordering on two sides, the Chesapeake and Ohio from the coal fields of the west to Norfolk, and the Norfolk and Western, linking it with the Valley of Virginia. Two rivers bordered Glasgow. The James and Maury uniting there made fine water power for industries. These three friends bought lots there. Mr. Williams put up an industry, a large sash and blind factory which did a thriving business for several months.

There were contracts for fifty five-room houses to be built in sixty days. A large force of carpenters was brought in. Their hammers made music early and late. A large brick Masonic Temple was built. Several large homes were built and occupied. Several large industries were established: a rolling mill, a stove factory, and a tile mantle factory. Two hotels opened, a saw mill, several small business houses, meat shops and cake and candy shops. Churches were the last to be built; services of all denominations were held in the auditorium of the Masonic Temple. For several months all went merrily as a wedding bell; but alas! I must tell the reverse side of the picture.

Although the Glasgow Investment company had raised a huge sum in beginning their scheme, they made too large purchases of industrial plants with too liberal terms to the owners. Instead of starting on a small scale and increasing gradually, they brought in furnished plants employing many workmen. They installed a small electric light plant at Greenlee to light the big hotel. They announced in their weekly newspaper, The Glasgow Herald, that the hotel would be illuminated a certain night. People came from far and near to enjoy the wonderful sight. It was indeed a grand beacon on that high hill. All the industrial plants were in full blast for a few months, then the sad fact became known that the funds were exhausted. Everything came to a standstill by December 25. So when the carpenters and all the employees went home for the holidays, they never came back to resume their jobs.

The bubble had burst. Many investors were completely "broke" by the failure. To add to their distress there came, about this time, a big depression for the country. There were several boom towns that did not collapse as completely as Glasgow: Buena Vista, Alta Vista, Radford and Christianburg. Roanoke had almost doubled its size and was called the "magic City." But Glasgow never recovered from the fall. It merely existed for thirty more years until the big Lees Carpet Factory from Philadelphia located there and proved to be its salvation to the present time.

The Glasgow company had elected as their president General Fitzhugh Lee, a gallant officer of the War. He was strictly military in training with no experience in business problems. He was appointed Governor-General of Cuba soon after the Spanish War. He said that during his stay there in Havana in company with the military officers he always had the feeling that he must look over his shoulder whenever they were behind him. They were skillful handlers of dagger and dirk.

Among the first churches to be built was the Baptist—by Mr. Hall, a fine carpenter who had moved in from the country and for that reason could do the work for a moderate price. He used mainly unskilled workmen living in town, but constantly under his watchful eye. He built well and carefully.

By this time many prominent families who had moved in during the boom had returned to their homes. Only a small number of Baptists were left and they could not have built the church without the generosity of the Matthews family. Their son William gave the lots for it, and the two widows, senior and junior, gave most liberally for the building and the new organ. This was the time of low wages for railroad men, so they had neither much time nor money to spare, but they did make sacrifices and gave as liberally as they could.

Our pastor was Mr. Lamb, a young man from Amherst County. He was so interested in the progress of the building he worked on it almost daily helping Mr. Hall in any way he could. At last it was finished. We had an interesting dedication service—good ministers from Lynchburg, Roanoke and Lexington. Mr. Lamb had the supreme satisfaction of finishing his term of service from the new pulpit for another year. It should have been called Matthew's Chapel; this was suggested, but never brought to the vote of the church—an oversite. Many converts have gone out into the world from its threshold to serve, I hope, the Savior they found at "its humble altar."

I enjoyed my long life in Glasgow. They were full, compelling years for I was busy raising and educating my two daughters. They were also, many of them, lean years financially. I taught a private school of twelve pupils from among my neighbors in order to give my daughters class work. I continued this till they were old enough to go to college—one went to Hollins College the other to Randolph-Macon.

We had most desirable neighbors. Our nearest and most intimate ones were the Scotch-Irish Presbyterians—for which Rockbridge County is famous—on one side, and the Episcopalians on the other. They were always friends in need. The Baptist lived in a farther side of town and on adjoining farms. I felt that "The lines had fallen to me in pleasant places." I attended these churches and helped some with the music as organist. Also I taught a class in all the Sunday Schools. I enjoyed their close companionship.

After a few years we had the first of two serious epidemics. Typhoid fever was brought in by a neighbor's cook who had visited in an infected section. Glasgow was notably healthy with its clear cold water gushing from the north side of a large mountain under two huge boulders and free from contact. But there were several cases in town including my cook, who had visited the sick one at night without our knowing it, my two daughters, two of Mr. Paxton's daughters who were their chums, and several others. It was called the six-weeks fever, being very stubborn and debilitating to the patients. I nursed my cook and daughter day and night for three weeks, then sent for my cook's mother to come from the county to nurse her and help me in the sick room's daily cleaning, washing the floors and bedsteads with carbolic water. My husband was very successful and did not lose a case—and under circumstances void of present-day conveniences.

The winter of 1907 was the coldest ever recorded in that section. This was also the year of the second epidemic: pneumonia and influenza. The doctors of Buena Vista, Lexington and Glasgow worked ceaslessly during the four months it raged. There were many deaths in the County. My half-brother died in February at Natural Bridge where he was a clerk in Mr. Burgher's General store. There were not enough doctors for the demand as patients were all treated at their homes instead of being rushed to hospitals as they are today. My husband was again very successful, using the old treatment of fly-plasters and cornmeal mushes to relieve the lungs. It certainly made as many cures as the oxygen tents.

A much beloved member of my family in those character-building days was my mother. I could not have given almost my whole time to teaching without her. She took entire charge of the housekeeping; we always had a trained cook in the kitchen. Mother seemed so contented and happy with us. She loved Doctor as well as she did her own sons. He was always kind and gently thoughtful of her in every way. She was remarkably healthy, and he treated her little ailments with the doses of a child. She never had a long spell of sickness. She weakened away quietly in January 1912 in her ninety-fourth year. She too sleeps in the lovely burying ground at Glasgow almost under the shadow of Salling's Mountain, not far from the murmurs of the James on its way from the mountains to Hampton Roads.

A few years ago I wrote a sketch of my husband, and it might be well to include it here:

John Poindexter Cleveland was the youngest son of a large family of brothers and sisters. In his early teens he was fired by the absorbing preparations and drilling of soldiers for the Civil War, and at the age of seventeen he volunteered in an infantry company organized by Dr. Cocke. For two years he tasted all the bitter experiences, then returned from Appomattox with his parole of honorary duties performed, to a wasted and barren home. His father died in a few months leaving him to provide for his mother and two sisters.

The highland farm like many others was of a poor, eroded soil. He soon found that he had no turn for farming and must look for other business. Fertilizers were scarce and expensive; office jobs were hard to find and wages were low. He was handicapped by an unfinished education as he had left a private school under a tutor with nothing specialized. At this point the family doctor advised him to read medicine under him for six months, then go to medical school. This he proceeded to do, but it was hard, uphill work.

He was of a sympathetic nature and became a successful and much beloved doctor. He rode with saddle bags on horseback for wide country practice for several years, then became doctor for a Railroad Company in Georgia. He next became Resident Physician for a large slate mining company in Virginia.

In 1892 he moved his family to the new boom town of Glasgow in Rockbridge County where he opened a drugstore in connection with his practice. Here he spent the remainder of his life among warmly attached neighbors and friends.

Doctor Cleveland was always active in all movements for the advancements of the town, was a devoted member of the Order of Masons, and had a strong Christian character of unerring faith and kindly consideration of the rights of others. His life was guided by high ideals and motives. He was a Deacon in the local Baptist Church until his death in 1924.

Today, years later, I look out upon a new era. Another war has been fought and ended—a great war, this time not provincial but global. All the peoples of the world were engaged and affected by its results.

War never seems advisable or beneficial in its effects even when we think the object is a plausible one. This direct cause was retaliation and self-defense from a sneak attack from a heathen nation. One object was to help England in her great struggle with Germany under Hitler's demoniacal methods of warfare; another object was to free the small countries of Europe that were being smothered and destroyed by the same inhuman German forces; another object was to have a successful war to end all future wars. This aim is not yet satisfied since covetousness and prejudice are still properties of some countries.

It is a new era for the Southern Negro. They have the opportunities of higher education in colleges and universities presided over and taught by their own Negro faculties. They have justice in the courts, the right to vote, high wages, recreational facilities, churches of their own, conventions and rallies. Many are successful farmers and property owners. Opportunities for good citizenship are open to them. There is plenty of room in the broad, untilled acres of the Southland for the two races to promote good citizenship together.

If only the ministers will deal less in secular matters and more in teaching the subject that Paul gave them: "My great desire and prayer is to know Christ and Him crucified." We know so little about the power and wisdom of Christ in our daily lives. We hunger for the daily bread that feeds our minds and souls. Let the consecrated ministers give it to us out of their store-houses of knowledge of the Bible. So many newspapers and magazines crowd out daily study of the Bible, the only source of the food we need. "As panteth the hart for the water brooks so longeth my soul after Thee, O God."
